GENERAL CD-ROMs

Supervising Low-Level Sex Offenders in the Community: An Integrated Model. (CD-ROM)
Washington, DC: National Institute of Corrections. (HV 6556 S87 2010)

This training program is a collaborative response to supervising sex offenders and focuses on the role of probation and parole officers. The goal is to inform jail staff, law enforcement and community corrections professionals how to work together to supervise sex offenders. It uses an interactive format to help staff working with sex offenders increase their knowledge of supervising low-level sex offenders, determining sex offender risk and seriousness, identifying principles and barriers to collaboration, and discerning the difference between risk assessments and classification instruments.

- D2169 OSOR: Ontario Sex Offender Registry (DVD, 21 minutes)
The Ontario Sex Offender Registry provides police services with a greater ability to monitor sex offenders in communities. Upon conviction, the OSOR requires sex offenders to register with police in the jurisdiction where they reside. Offenders are then subject to various reporting conditions which populate the registry, which in turn provides information and investigative tools to aid police in preventing and solving crimes of a sexual nature. This program highlights the critical need for frontline workers to document and share details of their encounters with registered sex offenders to their Service's registrar. It also includes instruction on how to bring breached offenders into compliance and stresses the importance of rapidly accessing the OSOR database in the case of missing children. - D1788 Sex Offenders (DVD 23, 29 minutes)

- D2110 Sexual Offenders: Point of Intersection (DVD, 17 minutes)
Managing sex offenders in our communities is a shared challenge for police and probation/parole officers alike. Success relies heavily on consistent enforcement where offenders are identified in relation to breach of conditions or nuisance offences such as indecent acts, obscene phone calls, voyeurism and stalking behaviours. These "in between" activities may temporarily satisfy deviant sexual desires until opportunities are created for more serious contact offenses. Understanding the sex offender, their offending cycle, and how they rationalize their behaviours is just the beginning. When the paths of police and sex offenders engaged in inappropriate, seemingly minor behaviours intersect, failure to act may only bolster confidence. This program highlights the critical role that police officers play in ensuring that offenders are held accountable for their actions, and that information is shared in such a way as to ensure appropriate follow-up by police, probation/parole and the courts.
