

Greg Anderson, PhD

Dr. Greg Anderson (PhD) is experienced in teaching, learning, research and administration in a post-secondary and private company environment. He brings skills in innovation, project management, curriculum design, and university/college governance. Greg has been working in the post-secondary environment since 1986. His progressive experience includes Dean of Research and Graduate Studies at the Justice Institute of British Columbia, and Chair of the Kinesiology and Physical Education department, Manager of the Mission Campus, Chair of the Education Council and member of the Board of Governors at the University of the Fraser Valley. Greg has developed education pathways within college, university, for-profit and not-for-profit environments. He has a wide and varied research interest that includes exercise and occupational physiology, and public safety personnel health and well-being.

Greg is widely published in both academic and practitioner journals. He has been an invited speaker at regional, national and international venues where he enjoys translating “the science” for practitioners, providing them with a better understanding of the fundamental theory behind popular practice. As a practitioner, Greg has worked with physically demanding occupations (primarily police), and provincial and national athletes (most recently with the National Women’s Soccer team). For his work both provincially and nationally, Dr. Anderson was awarded the Canadian Society for Exercise Physiology (CSEP) Health and Fitness Program Recognition Award in 2003, recognizing his contributions to, and leadership within the health and fitness field. More recently he was the recipient of the CSEP Health and Fitness Program of British Columbia Service Award, Teaching Excellence Award, two JIBC Excellence in Applied Research Awards and Canadian Association of Research Administrators, Directors Award: Inter-Institutional Collaboration.
