CORRECTIONAL SYSTEM - DVDs

---

D1932      Healing the Spirit (DVD, 33 minutes)

This program concerns the relationships of Aboriginal people with the law. Topics include: the extent of Aboriginal over-representation in the criminal justice system; success stories of Aboriginal offenders who became law abiding citizens; early years of Aboriginal offenders; factor contributing to Aboriginal offenders getting into trouble; ways of Aboriginal offenders getting out and staying out of trouble; and recognition of larger social, cultural and political forces that impacted strongly on Aboriginal communities. (Nechi Institute) (E 98 C87 H427 1995)

D738      The Meaning of Life (DVD, 82 minutes)

This film looks at a very unusual prison, and at a fascinating model for rehabilitating prisoners - a collaboration between the Chehalis Nation of British Columbia and Correctional Service of Canada. Filmed over the course of two years at Kwikwèxwelhp (formerly known as the Elbow Lake Correctional Facility), the film examines a different way to look at the concepts underlying punishment and rehabilitation and the idea that the current prison system can be significantly changed by including community in the process. (Face-to-Face Media) (E 98 C87 M425 2008)

D1983      On the Red Road (DVD, 48 minutes)

A documentary about the transition of Aboriginal inmates from a federal prison to the outside. The program picks up two years after the completion of Within the walls: a story of healing. It focuses on four Aboriginal men, who talk about their ongoing "red road" program of healing, re-integration into the community and hopes for the future. (Chiario Productions) (HV 9309 B7 O57 2003)

D1537      The Spirit Within (DVD, 52 minutes)

Looks at native spirituality programs, led by native elders, and assisted by Liaison Officers, that have been established in Western Canada's federal and some provincial penal institutions. The way of life in the institutions, the impact of the programs, and depiction of the program, workshops and ceremonies provide an introduction to the facts of life faced by native inmates. (National Film Board of Canada) (E 98 C75 S658 1990)

D1312      Voyage of Rediscovery (DVD, 23 minutes)

This video documents the story of Frank Brown, who as a young Heiltsuk Native boy of Bella Bella, B.C., found himself in trouble with the law. In an agreement between family and judge, traditional Heiltsuk law was applied and he was exiled from his village to a remote island for eight months. As a result, his life was transformed and he eventually led a project which helped to restore a sense of pride to his people. (See-Quest Development Company) (E 98 C87 V68 1990)

- D354      Circle of Justice (DVD, 51 minutes)
 A film about going to prison to gain one's freedom. The stories of Aboriginal offenders unfold behind the walls of a federal penitentiary (Springhill Institution in Nova Scotia) as Robert, David and George struggle with issues of mercy and healing within a man-made institution designed to deter and punish. Gilbert Sanipass, a Mi'kmaq elder, brings his wisdom into the prison, and introduces members of the Native Brotherhood Association to their culture and traditions for the first time. Looks at the Kwikwexwel'hp Healing Lodge on the West Coast as an example of an effective means of combining corrections with Aboriginal healing and culturally-based programming, to enable a more productive reintegration into society. Unfortunately, no such facilities exist yet in the Maritimes, but the Brothers have created their own sweat lodge. (Kinetic Video) (E 98 C87 C575 2004)
- D1043      Incident at Oglala: The Leonard Peltier story (DVD, 90 minutes)
 Examines the 1975 incident where armed FBI agents illegally entered the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, resulting in the deaths of a Native American and two FBI agents. Explores the controversy and potential abuse of justice surrounding the case of Leonard Peltier, who was the sole person in the incident convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison. (Amazon.ca) (E 98 C87 I53 2004)
- D1522      Justice and Reconciliation (DVD, 55 minutes)
 Dr. Joe Solanto invites us to examine policies and practices which often result in social harm rather than an enhanced cultural dialogue. Solanto reminds us that acknowledging diversity in culture and circumstance in Canadian aboriginal communities is not enough; we must thoroughly examine the assessment tools and models we use when we approach aboriginal communities so as to avoid unintentionally continuing oppressive practices. At a deeper level, he notes, our widely accepted understanding of rights and personhood is a backdrop against which aboriginal people and their cultural values are often misunderstood and oppressed. Solanto challenges us to abandon flawed and inadequate practices and models in favour of community building, which begins with non-aboriginals acknowledging the healing that they must engage in order to become true allies on the path toward reconciliation. (Heartspeak Productions) (HV 8688 S653 2012)
- D1980      Keepers of the Fire (DVD, 24 minutes)
 Four elders--Dennis Thorne, Cecil Nepoose, Francis McAdam, and Elsie Paul--work with First Nations people who have been caught in the Canadian justice system. They help young people to regain their sense of spirituality and self-esteem through the wisdom of the sweat lodge, the sacred pipe, and the drum, presented in workshops and plays. The elders attempt to help with the issues of substance abuse, suicide and racism that plague Canada's First Nations people. (Great North Productions) (E 98 C87 K434 1993)
- D1975      A Way of Seeing: The Judiciary and Native Culture (DVD, 26 minutes)
 This program is addressed to B.C. judges to help foster clearer understanding of native people and culture. The goal of this training is that when a native person appears in a courtroom as victim, witness, or accused, a judge will understand that there are cultural reasons for native people's everyday behavior and courtroom conduct.
