EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT TRAINING INCIDENT COMMAND SYSTEM

PREPARE YOURSELF - PREPARE YOUR TEAM

- Swiftly respond to emergencies and disasters
- Effectively liaise with outside agencies and site support levels
- Ensure your team is properly trained and speaks a common language

Through JIBC's Incident Command System (ICS) courses, you and your team will learn a common response management model, so you can more effectively respond to emergencies and integrate smoothly with response agencies across North America.

ABOUT THE INCIDENT COMMAND SYSTEM

ICS is a recognized model for command, control, and coordination of response at an emergency site. Originally designed in response to wildfires, ICS has evolved into a flexible and scalable management system, providing a common response framework suitable to any size of event.

COURSES

Incident Command System Level 100

In this course recommended for all first responders and site-support personnel, learn a proven incident site management system for emergencies or disasters. Gain a basic understanding of the Incident Command System, its organization, principles, basic structure and common responsibilities.

Incident Command System Level 200

In this two-day course, learn a standardized method of managing any type of emergency. As an Incident Commander or responder, gain the knowledge and skills necessary to efficiently manage an emergency site at a small to moderate sized incident.

Incident Command System Level 300

In this intermediate-level two-day course, learn a flexible and expandable structure that can be easily adapted based on the needs of an incident. Designed for supervisory level personnel, gain the skills necessary to manage medium to larger size incidents.

Incident Command System Level 400

In this advanced-level three-day course, utilize immersive simulation technology to learn how to manage large and complex emergency incidents. Explore methods for managing activities and resources in multi-agency and multi-jurisdictional settings.
