

Email Request

It seems that emailing a request from this newsletter isn't as easy as it should be. We're working with our software provider to simplify the process; but in the meantime, if you'd like to email a request for items from the Library, the easiest way is to let your mouse do the work. Once you've discovered an item that you'd like to borrow, just highlight the identifying information (title, author, call number) from the catalogue and then copy and paste it into an email to library@jibc.ca.

Another option is to use our catalogue "list" option to email a list of items to yourself. Then you can forward the list to us from your own email address with your request. (Caution: if you simply send your list to library@jibc.ca directly from the catalogue we won't be able to determine who it's from!)

Once you email the information to us, we will send the items you've requested to the address that we have on file for you. If you're a first-time borrower, we'll ask you a few questions, register your information, and then the items will be on their way to you.

Research Methods:

In addition to theoretical discussions, our resources on research methods provide practical guidance for conducting various types of research in a broad range of subject areas including the following: criminal justice, indigenous peoples, education, health, and medicine.

Police Use of Deadly Force:

Encounters resulting in the use of deadly force are among the most difficult and controversial for police officers. Our resources cover a range of issues, from suicideby-cop examinations to shoot/don't shoot training scenarios.

New Audiovisual Materials:

Some of the DVDs that we've recently added to our collection cover the following topics: body language, children of divorce, fire prevention, fraud, hazardous materials, job search, nervous system, prisons, stress management, trench rescue, Vancouver's Downtown Eastside, and wound care.

Just Ask!

To borrow any of these items from our Library, don't hesitate to contact us by phone, 604-528-5599; fax, 604-528-5593; or email, library@jibc.ca. We encourage ALL feedback. Please tell the editor what you love, hate, or would like to see changed in Library News!
